

3-8 year old Program

Approximately 10% of preschool and elementary children have later developing speech, language, mild social difficulty, and/or mild learning challenges.

Developmental issues are not typically covered by insurance. In response, SpeechKids introduced small groups to offer an affordable way to address developmental skills. These groups consist of two to four children, all with mild articulation, language, and/or social needs.

TALK Group: A program for 3-8 year olds

TALK (Therapy for Articulation and Language for Kids) Groups are:

- fun;
- affordable;
- unique; and
- effective.

What do the children do in TALK groups?

TALK groups are similar to the types of speech and language groups often seen in school settings. The children attend for 45 minutes.

They play games and participate in language experientials as they practice their speech sounds, listening skills, language skills, and social skills.

Who conducts the TALK group?

TALK groups are conducted by a speech language pathologist and, if needed, a speech language para-professional. A treatment plan is designed for each child by the therapist. With a team approach, it is possible to give individualized instruction as needed.

How effective are TALK groups?

Schools have been utilizing this format successfully for decades. Unfortunately, many districts have discontinued services for mild delays as they may not adversely affect learning.

How affordable are TALK groups?

TALK groups are $50.00 per session, after cash discount, and are limited to 2-4 children.
